After completing my studies, I specialised in the project business and efficient project management. Since then, in strong collaboration with the customers, I lead projects to success. This can only be achieved with intensive communication, openness and an equitable interaction with each other. I place particular value on this.

Each organisation and each branch is different. For this reason, I see it as absolutely necessary to understand the circumstances of the customer, be it the structures, products or social issues, to adjust to them and to consider them in the project.

In my projects, there is always a goal, but the success in the realisation of the project must offer the customer sustained additional value beyond this goal.
