The bonds I have with my family, including a well-developed sense of responsibility, give me deep roots. Time and again, I embrace new experiences with enthusiasm and a joy for experimentation. A readiness to take risks and the courage to make mistakes is, from my viewpoint, indispensable. In summary, I regard myself as a multi-faceted, flexible person who can absorb differing points of view and reflect upon them. In this process, a genuine interest in, and a deep level of understanding of humans is essential. In my work, I orientate myself to the needs of my customers. Quality is more important to me than quantity, loyalty is my highest commandment. My guiding principle is, therefore: relationship before business.
